Title: Death Anniversary of Prof. Adam Smith

I. Introduction

The Department of Economics, Rajarshi Shahu Mahavidyalaya, Latur (Empowered Autonomous Institution), organized a programme on the occasion of the Death Anniversary of Prof. Adam Smith on 17 June 2026. The programme was conducted to pay tribute to Prof. Adam Smith, the Father of Economics. Major aim of the programme to create awareness among students about his contribution to economic thought and the development of classical economics. The session encouraged students to understand the relevance of Adam Smith's ideas in the present economic scenario.

II. Objectives

To pay tribute to Prof. Adam Smith on his death anniversary.

To familiarize students with the life and contributions of Prof. Adam Smith.

To create awareness about the principles of Classical Economics.

To understand the importance of “The Wealth of Nations” in the development of economic thought.

To motivate students to study the evolution of economic theories.

To promote academic interest in the history of economic ideas.

III. Details of Participants

There were 28 participants including 09 Male and 19 Females.

IV. Brief Summary of the Function

The programme was conducted on 17 July 2026 at Hall No. 205 under the guidance of the Department of Economics. Dr. B. P. Gadekar, Head of the Department of Economics RSM Latur, served as the resource person and delivered an informative lecture on Adam Smith's life, works, and contribution to economics.

Dr. Gadekar highlighted Adam Smith's landmark work The Wealth of Nations and explained important concepts such as the division of labour, specialization, self-interest, free markets, and the invisible hand. He also discussed the significance of Smith's ideas in the development of classical economics and their relevance to the modern economic scenario.

The session was coordinated by Prof. Nitin Walke. Students actively listened to the lecture and participated in the academic discussion. The programme helped students develop a better understanding of Prof. Adam Smith's contribution to economic thought.

V. Conclusion and Feedback

The programme was conducted successfully and achieved its objectives. Students gained a better understanding of Adam Smith's life, works, and contributions to economics. They appreciated the informative session and expressed interest in participating in similar academic programmes in the future. The activity strengthened students' understanding of the historical foundations of economics and inspired them to study of economic theories in greater depth.
