

Celebration of International Human Rights Day (10/12/2019)

The first activity that was conducted in Sociology department was celebration of Human Rights Day. 10th December is celebrated as International Human Rights Day on 10th December 2019. On the occasion of this day, we conducted student seminars in classes. Students were asked to express their opinions about importance of human rights.

Eighteen students participated in this activity. They expressed view about important of spreading the value of human rights especially at the global level. In the context of growing violence against women and also against the weaker sections in society they mainly talked about various forms of violation of human rights on everyday basis. For instance, they particularly talked about education of women as a basic human right. In this context they discussed how even if woman's education is well accepted value, girls in the family are still not encouraged to pursue higher education. In this sense, they said it is nothing but violation of their basic human right.
